An ember sparked will softly glow,
and fed by fuel, will grow and grow.
I once was cinder, sparked by you,
first timid. . . till the flames then grew.

And so our start was touch of dawn,
with amber hue, for I was drawn to eyes so welcoming and warm
I never guessed you'd do me harm.

With cold of night came shadows' pall,
and I could not tear down your wall.
By midnight's hour, the fire was dead.
Mere ashes smoldered in its stead.

You left, and should you reappear,
I've vowed to shun you. Now I fear the very thing for which I yearn -
one touch. . . and then again - to burn.
